Dear Thunder's Mouth,

Along with other misleading and unjustified puffery for Mark Lane's "Plausible Denial" your ad in The Nation for 11/18/91 contains a lie I ask you to correct:

"Mark Lane was the first to expose the cracks in the Warren Commission's official report on the Kennedy assassination in his book, Rush to Judgement."

Although Lane has long pretended that he owns the subject, the first of my books was published at least a year earlier and it was followed by others that preceeded Lane's.

In fact I had completed two books by the time his appeared, the first two of the four-part Whitewash series.

As I hope you have no occasion to learn, taking Lane's unsupported word for almost anything can entail some risks.

sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
